“ continued.....To the World Jean was always the center of attention with so many people flocking to him to be a part of his entourage basking in his light. However, there was a deeper side to Jean that longed for the simple things in life that was missing from his. After losing the love of his life, things became difficult. He missed her – he missed the love that they shared and he was never the same without her. Death changes you and there is always a void that remains in your heart once you can no longer hold a person you love. I don't think I fully understood the pain that he described back then because I had never lost anyone I loved so dearly. I think now I am finally able to understand the grief. I feel it all, now that he is gone. But now he is with his beloved Tina and they are reunited I know. I can hear their laughter and happiness all the way from Heaven. No more pain – no more sorrow – only love that goes on. Some people come into your life for a reason and you are forever changed. You discover that your life becomes a better place to live in simply by that one person being there. Jean – for all of these years you have been my brother, my mentor, and my best friend. Thank you for being the sun in my sky radiating your light down on me. Your spirit lives on in me and every person you have touched along the way. How grateful I am that you shared your life with me. I will never forget each gift of joy that you have given to me. Every memory we've made will remain burned deep inside my soul. I will go on missing you every day of my life. My love for you is boundless and will wrap around you like a blanket. I hope you are able to feel its warmth on the other side until I am able to get there and hug you once again. Love always, Kristin

“ It took me a few days to decide to do this.
My heart is so heavy with grief!
Jean was my Team Lead, but most importantly he was my friend. My husband and best friend died in 2018. I was a mess!
I was in limbo with no where to see a light.
Jean saw and knew that I wasn't doing good.
He called me over repeatedly for coachings and just talked me through my pain.
After a few weeks I begin to see the light in a thick fog. I can't think Jean enough for what he did for me and he will be greatly missed.

Rest well Jean, go paved the way on the other side for when we come “ Jean- I don't even know what to say. You were always an inspiration and an amazing mentor. I could go to you for any advice. I can't remember how many times you told me sometimes you have to leave the money on the table. You always had time for us. You helped me grow into the Trusted Advisor role. Your presence was always felt at work-making us laugh. Helping with motivation. You were unique and amazing at the same time. I haven't seen you for years but you really made an impact on my life.

Be happy with Tina now.You'll always be missed.

Love you Denise "Gail"
